Description: JPA Stack Exchange is a question and answer site for enterprise developers using the Java Persistence API and other Java platform technologies. It only supports questions that are actively being worked on by developers, and it excludes questions seeking debugging help ("how do I...") or advice on how to code ("do this in C#").

If you have such a question, ask on Stack Overflow instead. Okay, the problem here is that the PK is the next of the sequence, and so in the delete method you have to update the prev

key after the succ
key. I'm not sure
why you are re-
checking if it's a
prev key and an
succ key, then you
would set it as a
next key. public

conclude that the Sheriff's failure to honor the group decision of those attending the hearing could not be excused on the basis of his plea of inability to do so. As previously indicated, the evidence abundantly shows that the Sheriff possessed an ability to hear and understand the testimony, and more importantly, that he could and did do his part when he testified before the jury.

The record indicates that all testimony before the jury was given orally. The trial judge made every effort to follow the dictates of Iverson. In the preliminary hearing before the jury, the court informed the jury of the nature of the summary hearing and gave it the necessary admonitions with respect to the "weight and effect" to be given the evidence. This the court failed to do at the "emergency" hearing before it. The presence of the judge before the jury would have been of little consequence had the court merely given the jury the same admonitions in the jury room as were given the jury at the bench. Iverson does not require a "preliminary hearing" in the jury room, but it does demand that the judge do all that is reasonable and possible to protect the witness from any injury at the time of the "emergency hearing." Even if it be assumed that the sheriff's testimony had been admissible at the

"emergency hearing," as a matter of law the state could not properly ask the sheriff to comment on what he had heard and seen, for the simple reason that what was said before the jury was not properly admissible. This is what distinguishes this case from one in which the testimony of a physician or other similar witness may be introduced.

In such instances,
the testimony is
generally
admissible without regard to the presence or
absence
