INDIANAPOLIS -- The Los Angeles Rams failed to make the playoffs, but they still were received well at the NFL Scouting Combine last week. Safety Eric Weddle recalled a couple of specific conversations he had with Rams new coach Sean McVay, and said those types of discussions were in the back of his mind as he worked out at Lucas Oil Stadium. "I think there's a certain comfort level when you go in and you're in the big meetings," Weddle told ESPN.com following Tuesday's workout. "As soon as you walk in the door, he comes right up to you and has a conversation with you. I think that's good. I think you have to. I think that's part of the job of a head coach and bringing players in and just kind of setting the tone." Weddle's new coach, Todd Bowles, served as the secondary coach in Atlanta when Weddle played there from 2007 to 2013. "It was very similar, pretty much the same," said Weddle, who signed with the Rams as a free agent in March. "It's the way that he talks to people, the way he analyzes things and processes things and just the overall energy of the meeting is kind of the same. I think there was a little small talk, really, that kind of got you going. "There's a lot of things you do on a day-to-day basis, but there's a lot of things that you don't necessarily do on a day-to-day basis, and he's able to put a lot of things out there." Weddle (6-2, 213) said he's not surprised by how McVay manages the personalities of his players. "I don't think it's surprised me. I think he's very good at that and he communicates well, and he gets through to people. So, I think he has a great ability to speak to his guys in a very unique and honest way," Weddle said. "There's no BS there. When you have really good relationships with guys, you can handle a lot more." The Rams brought in Weddle at the veteran minimum -- $3.42 million -- 1cdb3666d

With a little preparation, it will be a much smoother trip. In this article, we'll give you some tips on how to choose the best car seat for your child. This is going to require you to think about your child's age and size. Make a Declaration of Independence. The first thing you need to do is to think about your child's size and how it is going to be used. If you plan on letting them ride along with you in the front seat, then they will need a booster car seat. If you plan on taking them somewhere, then the next seat up to you will be a car seat. The baby seat will work very well for situations like this. If you need to keep your child in one car and you need to use another one, then you will have to get a booster car seat. What your child's age will determine. The next thing you need to take into account is your child's age. If you have a baby, they will obviously be small. They will not need to use a car seat. If you have a toddler, they will be big and your car seat needs to fit them. If you have a large child, then you will need a booster car seat. How they are going to be used. You also need to decide how you are going to be using your child. If you have a short trip or one that you are only going to be using for a few hours then the best thing to do is to get a baby seat. If you have a long trip, then you should consider a car seat. This way, they will be safe and you will have no difficulty. You should then decide if you need to replace it every time you travel. You can get an infant car seat that will last you a few months. So your first car seat can be a backup seat
